Plays and Players

When A. G. Delamater and William Norris entered into a partnership last year for the purpose of making high class theatrical productions, it seemed an ideal arrangement, as both of the gentlemen have an enviable reputation in the theatrical world. William Norris is perhaps the most versatile actor on the American stage; for during the last few years he has conclusively proven that he is equally at home in comedy, drama, opera or tragedy, and this from one to the other with the most consummate ease. He is the creator of King Dodo, The Burgomaster, Alan in "Babes in Toyland," the leading comedy roles in "Tom Jones," "The Cingalee," and other famous musical comedy and comic opera productions, and is this season the star of "The King of Cadoria." He has also secured emphatically in several strong dramatic roles including the Jester with Viola Allen in "The Palace of the King," and as Pinchas in "The Children of the Ghetto." He is also a well known art connoisseur and collector, consequently it is only natural that he should give the Delamater and Norris productions the artistic touches so noticeable in George Barr McCutcheon's "Beverly," to be presented at the Grand Saturday afternoon and night. Mr. Delamater is a young and progressive manager and has had long experience in the management of leading musical and dramatic organizations, having been strongly identified with attractions for a number of years, and the trade mark of A. G. Delamater and William Norris Inc. should be a sufficient guarantee of the merit of any production which they may send out.

That old, old story, so new to present day theatergoers, "slavery days," will be realistically interpreted at the Grand Monday afternoon and night, November 14, by Stetson's spectacular "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company. For this season, the members of the Stetson company were selected especially for his or her adaptability to the roles essayed. The result has been a rarely harmonious whole. It is claimed which has done much to add to the effectiveness of the production. The scenery, painted especially for this revival, includes a number of handsome scenes reproduced from pictures of the localities mentioned in the book, as they were at the time when the great author first wrote the story, more than fifty years ago.

The rare combination of delightful music, witty dialogue, originality of theme, brilliant lyrics, a clever company, beautiful musical chorus, and a scenic environment which has been described as a dream of scintillating iridescent color, as said to be some of the qualities responsible for the phenomenal success of that piquant musical mixture, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," which will be the attraction at the Grand opera house soon.

Manager Wade has always been noted for the thorough scenic environment of his spectacular productions, and in "The Time, the Place and the Girl" he has, if possible, outdone all previous efforts.

"The Yankee Doodle Boy," a play by Powell and Cohan, was the attraction at the Grand Thursday night. The show was not very good and was
